- Soviet foreign policy will be guided by a desire to maintain posoc. The PPR is determined to safeguard the posoe in order to rotain its present gains.
- 2. The US is trying to draw Germany into its can orbit and make it a bulwark against the USSR, but the USSR will never permit a solution to the German problem which would make another German attack on the USSR possible. The Soviet proposal to Germany would provide a peaceful, friendly and neighborly relationship, and a gradual change and reconstruction in the Commistic spirit which would eliminate for all time the possibility of Germanageression against the Slavie macions.
- 3. The Seviet strategy is skillful. Moletov believes it will be easier for the Germanists than for the Feles to desinate and win over the Germans. Germanists in both Germany and the USSR want to end the unhealthy and enervating tension which exists between the two countries, and German Communists have premised Stalin that the tension will ease and that future relations will be chaped concerding to the Rismarck traditions. A new Auropean order will then be created.
- 4. If the conference dealing with the German problem ends unauccessfully, the Slav mations, under Soviet leadership, will again turn to the capitalistic nations with an appeal for peace. The breakup of the conference will also be considered in manifestal declaration of war and will be answered by an increase in military preparedness to withstand aggression. At the present there does not sock to be much chance for an improvement in US-Soviet relations; the anti-Communist campaign in the US leaves little hope for a change in US pulley. The one last chance for preserving the posec is a mosting between Stalin and President Trumane.
- 5. The Soviet Union will not alter its policy toward southeastern Europe and will put every effort into attempthening the people's descoracion. To defend the pence it will mobilise its entire attempth and play every argument to convince the Anglo-Sexons that war will be of no advantage to them, should they provoke it.
